From the mid-1970s until her retirement in 2009, Brignolo's keen eye, sense of perfection, and dedication to photography helped her to become an award winning photographer. Within the Anne Brignolo Studio collection is not only her correspondence and notes on her work, but a vast collection of the work itself.

Biographical History

Anne Brignolo (1919-2014) was a prominent studio photographer based out of Bridgeport, Connecticut. Her father, Bartholomew, and her mother, May Smith, were both involved in the photography business since before Anne's birth, and she learned the art of not only taking photographs but retouching and dark room work from them. They established the family business, Brignolo Studios, back in 1912, and after they retired from the work, Anne stewarded the enterprise until she retired in 2009.

Brignolo Studio, located on Kossuth Street and Barnum Avenue from 1927 onward, was the only studio that Anne worked out of. While she hired other photographers to go out and do on-location photographs at various events such as bar/bat mitzvahs and weddings, Anne herself was an exclusively studio based photographer. This allowed her to control her surroundings to perfection, and many photographers and sitters have remarked that she was meticulous in her work. A single shoot was likely to last for at least a few hours, sometimes even a full day.

Her portrait work was immensely respected by her peers, and is one of the reasons that upon the announcement that she would be retiring in 2009, many fellow photographers that her sense of perfection and skills would be sorely missed. Those photographers also considered her a premier portrait photographer, which is understandable as she retired after 50 years of work. Many of the works the Bridgeport History Center holds bear their respect in the form of numerous awards given to various portraits.

Brignolo's personal life saw her attend Russian ballet school in New York City at age 17. She married her husband Lauren Hourcle sometime in the late 30s, and the couple had two children together. After her retirement, Brignolo moved to Washington State to be with her daughter. Anne Brignolo died in February of 2014.

Scope and Content Note:

Most of the collection 16 by 20 portraits from the 1980s, many of which Brignolo submitted to various photograph competitions and won awards for. Many of these portraits are wedding photographs of brides from the greater Bridgeport area, and showcase both Brignolo's talent and popular styles at the time. Digital files exist on CD-ROMs.

Also included in the collection are notes about her lighting set ups, and a remarkable piece of early photography equipment that Brignolo's father used to measure out photograph developing chemicals.

Arrangement note:

The collection is arranged into three series – the first contains notebooks, correspondence, and advertisements used to promote the studio. The second and the largest is series two, which consists of a large body of Brignolo's studio portraiture beginning in the 1970s and continuing to the mid 2000s. This includes both traditional and digital photography. The final series consists of several objects.
