Biographical Information or Administrative History

Luciano Fausto Garcia and Caridad “Cachita” Utria Garcia emigrated from Cuba in 1942, moving first to Ansonia, Connecticut, where Caridad’s sister, Emilia, and her husband, Ramiro Arias lived, then later settling in Bridgeport, on Prospect Street. In 1942 Bridgeport industries were fully engaged in war-time production and factory jobs were plentiful. The couple were married by a Justice of the Peace in Ansonia in 1943. Eventually, the Garcias lived with their two children, Diane and Fausto, in the City’s West End, where the family attended St. Stephen’s Church and School. Finally, they bought a house on North Anthony Street and Diane attended Central High School.

Luciano, known as Fausto, spent his entire career at the Jenkins Brothers Company. His wife, Caridad, worked at Jenkins Brothers, too, but she was a seamstress and worked at several other Bridgeport factories and businesses, including the American Fabrics Company, throughout her tenure in Bridgeport. The couple were long-time members of Bridgeport’s Cuban Club and Fausto served as its president for many years. The Garcias retired to Hialeah, Florida where they lived for 25 years before moving back to Bridgeport. Luciano died in 2011 and Caridad in 2008.

Caridad's mother, Carmen Sera Utria, also came from Cuba to Bridgeport and worked at Jenkins Brothers, but moved back and forth between Cuba and the United States, settling permanently in Connecticut and later Florida in late 1961 when restrictions then prevented her from returning to Cuba. Emilia and Ramiro Arias also moved to Hialeah, Florida. Luciano's and Caridad's daughter, Diane, has remained in Bridgeport for her entire adult, working life and has a career in the health insurance industry.

Scope and Content Note

This is a small collection that consists mostly of a few paper items from Luciano Garcia's work at Jenkins Brothers along with photographs from company outings and events. There are three Jenkins Brothers employee identification badges for Luciano and Caridad Garcia and Carmen Utria, Caridad's mother, in good condition. Mr. Garcia's portion of the collection also includes personal photographs and a small collection of postcards. In addition to the Jenkins Brothers items, of particular note, is a collection of both U.S. and Cuban-published, Spanish language newspapers, a book, and a periodical. Newspaper titles include Diario de la Marina, El Avance Criollo, Zig-zag libre, Revolucion, and Norte. The book is a history of Cuba published after the revolution.

Garcia also kept individual issues of widely available, mainstream U.S. newspaper and periodical titles such as Time, Look, Saturday Evening Post, and Life magazines, the New York Daily News and New York Times, Bridgeport Post and Telegram, and the Miami Herald. These publications and clippings were mostly dated from the 1960s through the early 2000s and reflected Garcia's interest in baseball, the Vietnam War, the Cold War and U.S.-Soviet relations, communism in Latin America, the Jonestown massacre in Guyana, and the Elion Gonzales case. Unfortunately, these items were in poor condition and had to be discarded.

Arrangement Note

The collection consists of two series. Series I is devoted to Luciano Garcia's papers and Series II is devoted to Diane Garcia's materials. There are no subseries; items are grouped by general type or genre.
