

UNITED STATES POSTAL SERVICE BLACK HERITAGE STAMP SERIES

In 1978 the United States Postal Service established the Black Heritage Stamp Series, which are the longest running US Commemorative Stamps.

The stamps are a wealth of educational information, profoundly significant to defining and shaping American life and culture through historical milestones, devoted entirely for prominent notable African Americans.

Powerful extraordinary monumental distinctive African Americans are memorialized and honored on miniature work of art, designed to highlight and recognize accomplished expressions, reflecting on brilliant contributions, social movement influences, outstanding achievements, admired poets, entertainers and sport figures.

The US Postal Service annually issues a new Black Heritage Stamp addition, elevating the importance and magnitude of African Americans achievements.

Since 1995 Alicia Labrador, hobby stamp collection has been exhibit and displayed in schools, art galleries, museums and libraries including community audiences.
