Highlights

October saw us continuing to see more new and regular customers coming into the library to use our services. It was a transition period of sorts for us as the imminent retirement of long-time Librarian, Jay Aiken, was on the horizon. Jay graciously took the time to show both librarians, Jeffrey Coutts and Ron Fontaine, the intricacies of ordering books from our suppliers, Baker & Taylor and Midwest Tape.

On the programming side, October was Halloween Month. To commemorate that, and to get into the spirit of that unofficial holiday, RandR presented two programs online. Jeffrey Coutts hosted them with the help of Library Assistant, GianCarlo Amado. Jeff's rundown of them is on the first page of this report

All four of our Library Assistants kept busy on their assignments, both in RandR and in the Bridgeport History Center (Michael Hawkins, especially, here). Robert Jefferies continued his ongoing periodicals check-in duties. Nick Roman assisted on some computer and other technical matters, as he is quite adept in those fields. He also continued with his usual task of garnering supplies for us. GianCarlo Amado not only helped Jeff with Adult Programming but continued with his monthly tasks of compiling statistics and forwarding them to Jay Aiken for reporting.

As always, it was a fruitful month in aiding our patrons and getting our work done "behind the scenes". We are looking ahead towards November and December with the holidays and the programming & tasks that await us.

Respectfully submitted,

Ron Fontaine, Librarian III
